METAPHOR AND MYTH IN SCIENCE AND RELIGION

EARL R. MacCORMAC

Earl R. MacCormac began this book with two major purposes in mind: (1) to investigate the use of metaphor by scientists and theologians; and (2) to assess the philosophical demands for meaning placed upon religious language. These two aims united in a single theme when he found that scientific language employed metaphors in a manner similar to the religious uses of metaphor. Spurred on by this discovery, Professor MacCormac constructed a theory of metaphor that would account not only for scientific and religious uses, but also for literary and philosophical uses. The study of metaphor extends into a concurrent theory of myth, and the realization that scientists as well as theologians formulate myths.

FROM ENLIGHTENMENT TO REVOLUTION

ERIC VOEGELIN

Edited by JOHN H. HALLOWELL

"Eric Voegelin describes the central conflict of Western history . . . as the conflict between spiritual and temporal powers." Thomas Molnar, The Alternative: An American Spectator

"Hallowell's preface puts the classical writings of Eric Voegelin into their proper perspective. . . . A must for students interested in the history of great political ideas." Andrew Gyorgy, The Key Reporter

"Brilliant, eminently readable." Gregor Sebba, The Southern Review
